Root Canal Therapy

- You may experience moderate pain and sensitivity to pressure when biting immediately after Root Canal Therapy. The healing process takes some time but the discomfort should subside within a few days.
- Take all prescribed medication as directed.
- Take pain medication as soon as possible, before the local anesthetic begins to wear off. This allows for more effective pain control.
- Continue with normal oral hygiene procedures involving brushing and flossing.
- When possible, try to chew on the opposite side of your mouth until the permanent restoration is placed. Until this time your tooth is susceptible to fracture.
- Call the office immediately if you are experiencing pain, swelling, the temporary material is dislodged, or if you have any questions at all.
